

Professional Bio

Caitlin Doyle is a poet, essayist, critic, and librettist whose work has appeared in The Guardian, The Atlantic, Yale Review, The Los Angeles Review of Books, Best New Poets, American Life in Poetry, the PBS NewsHour Online Poetry Series, and elsewhere. She has received awards, scholarships, and fellowships through the Yaddo Colony, the MacDowell Colony, the James Merrill House Writer-In-Residence Program, and the Bread Loaf Writers' Conference, among others. The recipient of a Pushcart Prize Special Mention, she has taught as the Writer-In-Residence at Interlochen Arts Academy, the Emerging Writer-In-Residence at Penn State Altoona, a Lecturer in Creative Writing at Boston University, an Elliston Fellow in Poetry at the University of Cincinnati, and the Writer-In-Residence at St. Albans School. Caitlin earned a PhD from the University of Cincinnati, where she served as Associate Editor of The Cincinnati Review. Most recently, she was awarded a Guild Hall Artist-In-Residence Fellowship and the Meringoff Nonfiction Prize through the Association of Literary Scholars, Critics, and Writers. Currently working toward the completion of her debut poetry collection, Caitlin is a faculty member at the Frost Farm Poetry Conference, and she serves as Interviews Editor for Literary Matters. She teaches literature and creative writing as Visiting Assistant Professor of English and Writer-In-Residence at Washington & Jefferson College in Washington, PA.