Professional Bio

Caitlin Doyle is a poet, essayist, librettist, and educator whose work has appeared in The Guardian, The Atlantic, The Slowdown, The Yale Review, The Los Angeles Review of Books, Best New Poets (University of Virginia Press), American Life in Poetry, the PBS NewsHour Online Poetry Series, and elsewhere. She has received awards, scholarships, and fellowships through the Yaddo Colony, the MacDowell Colony, the James Merrill House Writer-In-Residence Program, the Sewanee Writers' Conference, the Bread Loaf Writers' Conference, and the Association of Literary Scholars, Critics, and Writers, among others. The recipient of a Pushcart Prize Special Mention, a P.E.O Scholar Award, and an Amy Award in Poetry through Poets & Writers, she has taught writing and literature as the Writer-In-Residence at Interlochen Arts Academy, the Emerging Writer-In-Residence at Penn State Altoona, a Lecturer in Creative Writing at Boston University, an Elliston Fellow in Poetry at the University of Cincinnati, and the Writer-In-Residence at St. Albans School. Most recently, Caitlin has taught as Visiting Assistant Professor of English and Writer-In-Residence at Washington & Jefferson College. She earned a PhD from the University of Cincinnati, where she was the Associate Editor of The Cincinnati Review. Caitlin is a faculty member at the Frost Farm Poetry Conference, and she serves as Interviews Editor for Literary Matters.